Things to think about

Sleep can be affected by many things, for instance: stress, anxiety, other health issues, drug and alcohol use, shift work or a chaotic routine. If you are having problems with sleep it may be worth a trip to the doctor. Having made this suggestion to see a doctor, here are some practical ideas about sleep which may be of help.

Tips

- Sort out a routine for the daytime – regular get up times, eating [healthy], work or study, chores, and sleeping.
- Create a routine diary like the one below.
- Get up at the right time. What time do you have to leave for work? Then work backwards, 30 minutes for breakfast, 30 minutes for exercise or a walk, 30 minutes for getting ready, 30 minutes for incidentals. So set your alarm no less than 2 hours before you need to leave.
- Exercise, particularly earlier in the day, is one of the secret ingredients to a good night's sleep. In the evening try light exercise or a quiet activity.
- Avoid taking naps throughout the day.
- Avoid coffee, alcohol, cola and tea after dinner.

- Don't eat heavy snacks late at night.
- Make sure your bedroom is comfortable and dark.
- Have a warm shower and head off to bed when you are sleepy. Avoid watching TV in bed.
- If you wake in the night, give it 30 minutes or so and then quietly listen to a relaxation CD or gentle music. Otherwise get up, and do something relaxing and distracting. Refer to the progressive relaxation worksheet if you are thinking a lot.
- Treat it like a job, get into a routine, be strategically and diligently consistent-you may even bore yourself to sleep!

Exercise

Spend five minutes a day completing this diary for at least a week. The questions included in this diary are only an example of some things you may need to monitor if you want to maintain healthy sleep. You could add others.

The aim of this is to get used to developing a routine that is healthy for you.

Day of week	When time did I get up?	How much exercise did I do?	How many caffeine/alcoholic drinks did I have?	What time did I get to bed?	If I woke up during the night, what did I do?
Example	7.30am	30 minutes walk the dog	2 glasses of beer	11.00pm	Did not wake up
